I proceed to explain the whole story to her, and she proceeds to waste my time with hypothetical scenarios. At no point did she ever treat me like anything other than a potential criminal who was wasting her time. At the same time, we don't want to burden our law abiding citizens by making this common drug difficult to obtain," said the Senate sponsor, Republican Bill Holtzclaw of Madison. At this point she started giving me nothing other than one line statements that were designed to end the conversation. If nothing else I just wanted to get the ball rolling on finding out how this had happened. Opponents of the prescription-only push fought back with an aggressive advertising campaign: If I had somehow triggered this limit for the first time ever then so be it, but if someone is out there manufacturing meth using MY NAME I damn sure want to know about it and get it resolved. Basically you are treating my like a criminal with no rights. Let me say that again so it sinks in completely: Then she told me the information was stored in a State of Michigan database, completely contradicting what the pharmacist had told me. Most customers in this situation would be angry about the fact that they are being denied their medication, but I have told you several times now that I am concerned about identity theft and you do not care, and neither does your pharmacist who tried to help me. She said she would get me a number and went into her office. The measure, which won final passage in the Alabama Legislature last week, will help law enforcement fight this dangerous drug without unduly burdening consumers who need to buy some over-the-counter medicines. I tried to explain to her that my purchasing habits do not vary in regards to this medication but all I got in return was a series of interruptions and hand dismissive hand waving.
