

brand name seroquel vs generic

I am on the generic and have noticed no difference. I have been given the wrong dose of Seroquel before and I barely woke up for 2 days. Here's wishing you all good days and nights! I have short term memory issues from my meds so I could not remember exactly when I noticed the problem. For comparative purposes, let's say a person is taking mg Seroquel immediate release twice a day. First, Seroquel and Seroquel XR both have the generic name quetiapine fumarate. Seroquel XR contains inactive ingredients that sustain release of quetiapine fumarate over time, hence the "XR" designation. I've seen it in some of my patients that have adverse reactions to generics and been approved by insurance provider to take DAW. This why Dilantin is still made DAW. Reply Parent Thread Link. Oct 16, - I have always had a terrible painful reaction to seroquel generic. The name brand does not cause the painful aching side effect I get. I am unsure how to describe it other than my legs hurt to the point of tears and stretching them as far as possible relieves it for a few seconds, and it takes hours to go rubeninchids.comel XR - is the generic Seroquel the exact same. May 21, - I've just switched from Seroquel to the generic quetiapine for sleep, mg. I've not slept well on the generic quetiapine - I'm going to give it a bit longer before passing. I have bruises from trying to release the intense frustration and anger I felt. I had a brainstorm that maybe generic isn't the same as a Brand name. I actually looked up on computer yesterday and this site had pictures of the Generic Immediate Release and the rubeninchids.com what?! They replaced my Seroquel. Apr 14, - As far as brand vs. generic, generics have to meet quality standards as far as dosage (to the dosage stated), same drug as the brand, etc., they can't just be something they aren't or that they're not even close to.
