Search strategy and evidence selection About 'Evidence summaries: The Assessment Group's effectiveness analysis carried out for this guidance considered the TIA and ischaemic stroke populations to be equivalent in risk and outcomes and so they were modelled together. We identified no cost-effectiveness studies of clopidogrel in transient ischaemic attack TIA or TIA and minor stroke specifically. The Appraisal Committee recognised that recommendations could not be made for the use of clopidogrel for people who have had a TIA because it is not licensed for this indication. NICE guidance on clopidogrel and modified-release dipyridamole for the prevention of occlusive vascular events included an assessment of the cost effectiveness of clopidogrel for secondary prevention in people with ischaemic stroke.
