Thompson, the secretary of health and human services, publicly demanded that the company match prices charged by manufacturers of generic alternatives. Wehmeier, the chief executive and president of Bayer's American operations, cheerfully walked into the headquarters of the Department of Health and Human Services early this afternoon and predicted that he would need only a brief visit to the department to settle matters. But he and his aides ended up staying into the evening. Other antibiotics, like penicillin, have proved effective against anthrax and generic versions of these antibiotics are available in abundant quantities, he said. Tell us what you think. Please try again later. A central principle of the patent system is that a patent holder can choose whether to sell a patented product and for how much; pharmaceutical companies have warned that government efforts to set drug prices could discourage them from spending the money to develop new drugs. Events Guide Television Theater Video: Thompson at today's hearing, said this might not be adequate if anthrax were sprayed in large quantities on major metropolitan areas. Bayer officials appeared to have been caught off guard by the administration's sudden demand for lower prices.
