The actors described symptoms that suggest sciatica , or back and leg pain that could be caused by nerve damage. Painkillers such as oxycodone also aren't recommended for newly presenting cases of sciatica either, which is what was shown in the videos. I mean, it really worked. The study To determine whether patients could influence their doctors' prescribing practices, primary care physicians from six states viewed videos in which professional actors simulated a consultation with a primary care doctor. The prescribing changes are just the first of several provisions in the I STOP law designed to overhaul the way prescription drugs are distributed and tracked in New York. The law will require doctors beginning Aug. Also starting Saturday, Tramadol, a prescription muscle relaxant drug, will become classified as a schedule 4 drug as part of the I STOP law. The idea that patients' suggestions could influence doctors to prescribe things against their best judgment is especially troubling considering the recent spike in pain pill abuse. Even when the doctors didn't prescribe oxycodone in particular, they were more likely to prescribe another strong narcotic to patients who had requested oxycodone. Johnson of Upstate is happy about the changes. States have also been cracking down on pill mills that hand out narcotic painkillers to people who don't have a medical need for them. To determine whether patients could influence their doctors' prescribing practices, primary care physicians from six states viewed videos in which professional actors simulated a consultation with a primary care doctor. Under the new regulation, doctors can prescribe day supplies of hydrocodone for chronic pain patients. They are synthetic versions of opiate drugs such as morphine and heroin, derived from the opium poppy. Hydrocodone is usually combined with other drugs such as acetaminophen. The study found that patient requests for certain medications such as the powerful narcotic oxycodone "substantially affected physician-prescribing decisions, despite the drawbacks of the requested medications. The law also will eventually mandate that all controlled substances be prescribed electronically. Still, the results of the study could be partially attributed simply to the power of suggestion, Ubel said.
