I think the time has come for small pharmacies and large pharmacies to stand up to big PBMs and make a difference for our profession and in our patients lives. They do this in part by creating lists of drugs that will or won't be paid for and then use their scale to negotiate lower costs. I was born with it tilted the wrong way, so stomach acid was moving up through my esophagus and over time it wore away the lining to the point that my esophagus collapsed in three places. Perhaps the biggest threat of all: PBMs are being sued by some customers for double dealing, and they're now also starting to draw the attention of Congress. The government's allegation was that AstraZeneca paid kickbacks to ensure that Medco kept Nexium on its formulary. Miller does not, and he says Meridian avoids this practice because it gives PBMs "an incentive to fill inappropriately. They believe that the slices that the PBMs are taking only inflate the ultimate cost of prescriptions drugs. And, because some of their fees are pegged to the drug's price, the PBMs can actually profit from higher prices too. The reason pharmacists have an ax to grind with PBMs is that they feel the PBMs are squeezing profits out of every part of the industry the insurers, the drugmakers, and the pharmacists while providing little value. You can't talk to the patients. Just look at Nexium's list price. It's just the price of the drug before manufacturers do their deals with insurers and PBMs. And with that we should add that PBM clients have been getting mad at them lately. Other PBMs "have an incentive to keep it on there because the rebate is big," he said. YouTube Meanwhile, in Washington Pharmacists aren't the only ones concerned about the lack of transparency.
