Tamoxifen can also be effective after menopause, but aromatase inhibitors have been found to be more effective in reducing recurrence. We know that even after primary treatment for breast cancer there is a risk of recurrence. We know that estrogen works like a "growth factor" to fuel the growth of estrogen-receptor positive breast tumors by binding to estrogen receptors on the surface of the cancer cells. Secondly, talk to your insurance company. Both tamoxifen and aromatase inhibitors such as Arimidex can reduce your risk of breast cancer recurrence with some advantage associated with aromatase inhibitors but costs can be quite different.
