In an echo of the headache-medicine finding, the authors discovered that chefs opt for generics with what they call pantry staples, where they can readily ascertain that the generic salt or baking soda is the same as the brand-name alternative. Interestingly, a similar logic applies though only partially to food. Sign in or Register. Due to inactivity, you will be signed out of Walgreens. One moral of the story Slate advertisers should pay attention is that advertising works. A related issue is that you, personally, can do your part to wage war against waste and inefficiency by increasing social awareness of generic alternatives. And for a select few items, including both carbonated and noncarbonated beverages, yogurt, dough products, and dried grains, chefs are actually less likely than the average person to buy generic. Slate logo Sign In Sign Up. Chefs or head cooks at restaurants are more likely than the general public to buy all kinds of generic products: Nobody I know thinks advertising works on them or on anyone else.
