Federal Drug Administration put out a warning about Domperidone for possible cardiac side effects that were reported when this medication was given intravenously. Often an increase in milk production is seen within a few days, but some mothers may need a few weeks to see a maximum effect. You can speak with one of their pharmacists by calling. The most difficult part may be getting a prescription from a doctor because they are unfamiliar with it or they are fearful of the side effects that they have heard about when it is given by IV. Using the medication Domperidone can be very helpful. Many mothers take the medication for one to two months, but some may need to take it longer or even as long as they are nursing. But despite the increase in milk production, this medication has proven to have side effects that make its use problematic, causing fatigue and depression as well as other rare and serious effects. You can visit their website at inhousepharmacy. Jack Newman, a Canadian Pediatrician and lactation professional who has used this medication for more than 25 years. This medication is not distributed in the U. The initial dosing is usually 30 milligrams three times a day. Ideally taking the medication every 8 hours is suggested but this is not critical.
