Outlaw drug commercials, outlaw co-pay coupons," said Miller. That is why AstraZeneca's representative suggested over email that we ask the many PBMs running Medicare Part D plans why the drug costs so much emphasis added: You can't talk to the payers. Because of Meridian's pricing model, Miller is willing to show his clients exactly how much he makes off of every drug. They aren't the only ones concerned about the growing power of PBMs either. They encourage lower cost drugs, but clients ultimately pick what they want. Other PBMs "have an incentive to keep it on there because the rebate is big," he said. They do this in part by creating lists of drugs that will or won't be paid for and then use their scale to negotiate lower costs. They're driving drug costs. They're facing a backlash from America's largest employers, a group of which is working on a way to rewire the system. But that's exactly what they're doing, and it's driving some decades-old family businesses around the country to the brink. They believe that the slices that the PBMs are taking only inflate the ultimate cost of prescriptions drugs. PBMs are being sued by some customers for double dealing, and they're now also starting to draw the attention of Congress. He also frowns on the vertical integration going on in the industry. The reason I'm talking about Nexium is that I take the drug.
