I am getting it from a Canadian company for half of what the best US rates are. So far, so good. A friend found a place in Australia that is even less expensive My horse lives on the stuff, and it would be wonderful to find the best price "Generic" Omeprazole? Feb 16, - How does generic omeprazole compare to Gastrogard? The answer may surprise you! Find out what makes Gastrogard the best choice for treating ulcers. Shop our omeprazole paste for horses now. Our omeprazole for horses is designed to provide ulcer relief. Gastrogard is a paste form for a drug called omeprazole, which is also available over-the-counter in human drug stores, and sold under the brand name of Prilosec (which you can take if your horse gives you ulcers). Still, when GastroGard was introduced, I mostly remember conversations with colleagues along the line. Horse ulcer symptoms should ease within a few days for horses on GastroGard, but it takes about a month for ulcers to fully heal. Withdrawing omeprazole before healing occurs caused the reappearance of ulcers in over 90% of horses. Once horses are treated and ulcer free, they can go onto preventative doses of. That means that the medication doesn't work well for some ulcers, and, it implies that some horses aren't going to respond well to treatment with omeprazole treatment (omeprazole is the generic name for the drug). I'm usually not one to jump on the bandwagon of every new study, but I think that this one is pretty important. I know but you can have human Omeprazole in IV, enteric coated or Mups (disolvable for enteric feeding) and I'm wondering if the Gastroguard is mixed into something to work with the equine stomach better than the human one? If it was better to use generic Omeprazole, I am wondering why Vets px.
