Sometimes you order one drug and they send you a different product, telling you it's identical to the drug you ordered, or that they saved you money by sending you the alternative. It is better to get a prescription for it and let the doctors conduct the treatment. Even if the drug you received is the right drug, in the right dose, you will have no way of telling if it will conflict with something else you already take. If no one has claimed for the package then they would destroy Valium pills after a certain duration of time. More in Patient Rights. Buying Valium online legally from offshore pharmacies. Not all this advertising is credible. Since there may be no pharmacist involved in the transaction, and since you probably purchase prescription drugs or other medicines from other places, there will be no opportunity to review for drug conflicts. If you have a clear knowledge about the prevailing laws, there is no chance for you to get into trouble. It's possible, too, that the most fraudulent "pharmacy" will have the most official looking website! This is why a person should always check for legal issues while procuring Valium pills from offshore pharmacies. If drugs are not stored properly they will, at a minimum, lose their effectiveness. A stolen credit card can lead to identity theft. You might order a high-end branded drug, but what's in the bottle might be some other cheap substance manufactured to look like the drug you ordered.
