Eyes On The Horizon When people are new to paddleboarding, the tendency is to look down at their board. Properly holding your paddle will help you to make the most of each stroke. Scoop Faces Away It is easy to hold your paddle facing the wrong direction when your primary focus is staying on the board and feeling steady. Last updated Friday, 9 May. The allocation of these new spaces by the UAB acknowledges the intense activity of teaching and research carried out by the center since its inception 20 years ago. Knees First When you are first starting out on your paddleboard, begin on your knees. Not only does this potentially throw you off balance, it also slows you down. El navegador no permite el uso de javascripts. If you are new to paddleboarding, selecting a wide, stable board that is more forgiving will help get you up, and keep you up. If you are extending your paddle past your feet, you are reaching too far. Just remember to keep the scoop facing away from your body, and this will be one less thing to compromise your technique. Put Your Back Into It And Your Core No matter how much you want to use your arms as the primary source of power, remember that the majority of the work should be coming from your back muscles and your core. For efficiency and control, do not over paddle. When you have comfortably made it to your feet, remember to stand with your feet parallel and shoulder width apart. Best prices for Viagra!
