People who attempt to buy viagra or treatments for erectile dysfunction online risk wasting their money on costly fakes. Viagra goes on high street sale. Viagra, like all drugs, has potential side effects so patients may need follow-up assessments after they begin taking the drug. Men will also have to agree to have information passed on to their doctor and may be asked to attend follow-up sessions with their pharmacist. Several other newspapers reported the move to make the erectile dysfunction drug available for sale at selected Boots pharmacies. Any websites claiming to sell viagra should be avoided as they will not be regulated by the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain RPS and there may be concerns over quality, safety and effectiveness of the products they provide. What are the risks of buying viagra online? Does this mean I can go into a pharmacy and buy viagra? To get permission, pharmacies must be approved by the Medicines and Healthcare Regulatory Agency and the Care Quality Commission, which regulate the provision of medicines and healthcare. What if I have purchased or used a medication that I think may be illegal? Does this mean I can buy viagra online? So far, Boots is the only pharmacy to have been given such permission. Boots is the only pharmacist to have received permission to sell prescription-only viagra, and any issuing of viagra must be accompanied by appropriate health checks. While internet pharmacies can make it easier to obtain prescribed drugs, they cannot replace necessary face-to-face consultations with clinical staff, as the RPS has emphasised. Unscrupulous, illegal websites could still copy and display this logo so, in addition to this, the RPS recommends that users do the following: Check the registration status of the pharmacist.
